Using the Play Safe website

The NSW Health Play Safe website has everything young people need to know about safe sex and sexual health, including information on condoms, sexually transmissible infections (STI), testing and treatment.

Play Safe has a range of interactive features for self-assessment and offers a chat function where young people can get advice from a qualified sexual health nurse.

Ensure you are familiar with the website so you can help young people use the site to find the information and support they need.

Below are a few of the great features on the Play Safe website.

Free, confidential sexual health advice

If young people have sexual health questions, they can ask these confidentially through the websites' chat function and receive a confidential response from a qualified sexual health nurse.

Need to know where your local sexual health services are?

This page allows young people to enter a postcode and view a map view of nearby STI testing locations. There's also a quiz to help young people choose the right STI testing service for them.

Sex and relationships blog!

A hub of information about all things sexual health. Topics range from STIs, condoms and consent, to dating, discharge and sexual dysfunction.

Could you have an STI? Quiz

The quiz takes less than a minute and asks a few simple questions about sexual activity, condom use and previous testing to find out if a young person may be at risk of an STI. Any information provided is strictly confidential.

A-Z of sex lingo

Play Safe's official and up to date sex dictionary! Covering everything from areola to zoophilia.
